

Employment During Law School

Because of the rigorous nature of legal education, you may not be employed for more than 20 hours per week during any portion of the semester in which you are actively participating in more than 12 credit hours of course or co-curricular activities. You may obtain an exception to this rule, however, from the Associate Dean for Academic Affairs who will consider your course load, your GPA, your progress toward graduation, your extracurricular involvement, your other commitments, and additional relevant information.
