Academic Legal Writing is a seminar course on academic legal research, writing, and argument designed to help students prepare scholarly articles for publication.

ADVANCED LEGAL TOPICS I 771– Contemporary Problems in Law and Politics (1 hour)

This course will provide an intensive, one-week look into some of the hottest topics in law and politics. Topics will include the regulation of candidates and political parties after the McCain-Feingold Act, corporations and their rights after Citizens United and what that has meant for political campaigns, and Section 230 of the Communications Decency Act and its effect on political speech. The course is intended as a practical introduction to working on these timely issues, and will draw on the contrasting experiences of Prof. Eliason, a recent Democratic candidate for Congress, and Allen Dickerson, the Republican Vice Chair of the Federal Election Commission.

ADVANCED LEGAL TOPIC II 772 – Leadership in Law (2 hours)

This course is a unique opportunity for students to become familiar with leadership theories and models that can serve as frameworks when they serve in leadership roles and advise clients who serve in leadership positions. The course will also allow students to more fully develop their own leadership competencies including skills that will help them be successful in their careers and life.

ADVANCED LEGAL TOPIC II 773- Patent Drafting and Prosecution (1 hour)

This course is designed to teach the basics of patent drafting and prosecution and applies to STEM candidates and non-STEM candidates, alike. There are plenty of great patent owners and inventors that don't have a STEM background. We'll also spend some time discussing the day-to-day practice of patent prosecution and sitting for the patent bar, which may provide some helpful insights for upcoming graduates considering careers in IP.

ADVANCED LEGAL TOPIC IV 774- The School to Prison Pipeline (1 hour)

The school to prison pipeline is a national trend that is channeling children out of school and into the juvenile and/or criminal justice system, usually for innocuous behaviors. This trend disproportionately affects children of color, children with disabilities, and children from families with low socioeconomic status. This course will examine what started the school to prison pipeline, how it is continually perpetuated today, and what steps are needed to dismantle it.

ADVANCED LEGAL TOPIC VI 776- Appellate Advocacy

Mississippi Appellate Practice and Advocacy will provide instruction and training in appellate advocacy, with a focus on the Mississippi Supreme Court and the Mississippi Court of Appeals. Students may expect both classroom instruction on appellate practice and opportunities to review, consider, argue and decide appeals.

We will review and evaluate several actual Mississippi appeals. Students will be expected to examine the record, motions, briefs and opinions, from the trial court's final judgment through the issuance of the mandate is issued by the Supreme Court. Students will be expected to consider the strategic legal or procedural decisions made in appeals and discuss the potential consequences.

We will then focus on actual cases on appeal. Each student will have an opportunity to review several briefs actually filed, and then write a short appellate reply brief.

At the end of the semester, each student will have an opportunity to argue a case on appeal.

We will end the semester with the evaluation of a case from the appellate judge's perspective. Each student will consider and decide an appeal as a member of an appellate court. The students will also discuss how the final opinion should be drafted.

The course will also consider an understanding of the rules of professional conduct as well as best practices in professionalism when practicing in the appellate courts. Students will develop their understanding of the art of persuasion before appellate courts, both written and oral argument presentations.

The only required course materials will be the Mississippi Rules of Civil Procedure, which will be provided.

ADVANCED LEGAL TOPIC VII 777- Pretrial Practice

Instruction and practice in the legal skills needed for pretrial practice in federal and state courts, including pretrial planning, investigation, pleading, discovery, motions, and settlement.

SELECTED LEGAL TOPICS VI 706 – Privacy Laws

Privacy law and policy is one of the most important, rapidly expanding, and changing fields in the world today. Increasingly, most aspects of daily life involve the (often unwitting) collection, communication, and use of personal data. As personal data are generated and collected more widely, and are far more revealing, governments are challenged to determine the proper limits and regulatory structures to enforce those limits, while businesses and other data users must determine how to comply with those emerging rules, often in the context of new technologies and unclear norms. The field of information privacy is so large that we could cover it in two courses. This course will be a survey of information privacy topics that may include: the theoretical and constitutional background to privacy, the intersection of privacy and free speech, and the intersection of privacy in law enforcement and national security contexts, government records; consumer data, financial data; data security; education privacy; employment privacy; and/or international privacy.
